Activity three - Modal verbs explanation

Must May Might Shall Can Could Would Should

In English we use modal verbs to express, possibility, ability, probability, obligation, advice and politeness. They are verbs which behave somewhat irregularly in English but they always follow the same rules as each other.

Here are some examples:

1. Modal verbs are always followed by the bare infinitive (which is the infinitive without "to")

Example- I should go to work

I should to go to work X- not correct

2. They never change their form- they don't get an "s", "ed", or "ing"

E.g. I musted have been late X-

I must have been late

Modal verbs are a great way of adding clarity and detail to your English. They also allow you to make your sentences shorter and clearer.

E.g. It is possible for me to work tonight= I could work tonight.

In partners, can you guess which modal verbs could be used to express-

- a. Possibility
- b. Probability
- c. Obligation
- d. Politeness

Activity 4 - Dialogue- Read the dialogue with your partner, highlight the modal verbs in the text. Afterwards re-create a different dialogue about travel with your partner using the same modal verbs

Stephen: Hi, how are you?

Susie: I am good, thank you, how are you?

Stephen: I'm good as well, thank you for asking, is there any news with you?

Susie: Yes actually, at the moment I am getting ready for my holiday?

Stephen: Oh that sounds great, where are you going?

Susie: I'm going to visit Ireland, I plan on travelling all around the country, it should take me about two weeks

Stephen: I'm so jealous, Ireland really is the best country in the entire world, it's a must see for anyone who is interested in travelling

Susie: I know, I have heard the same thing. I was worried I wouldn't get the time off work but my boss was very kind and now I am so happy I can go.

Stephen: I wish I could go with you I have been there before.

Susie: Do you have any advice about where I should go?

Stephen: You should go to see Dublin castle. The wait to see it can be long sometimes but it is worth it. After that I would suggest going to the Guinness factory, you can go to a bar there where you get to see a view of all of Dublin

Susie: That sounds like it should be great! Would I have to book an appointment before I go?

Stephen: Honestly, I can't really remember but you might have to

Susie: Ok, that shouldn't be a problem, thanks for the advice and have a nice day

Stephen: Have a nice day

Activity 5 Listen to the song and fill in the blanks. Try to write down all the modal verbs in the song. Afterwards, with your partner discuss if you like the message of this song
